Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Friday 14 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Mostly dry overnight. Further showers Saturday.

This Evening and Tonight:
Dry, with clear spells possible, mainly across northeastern areas. Cloud thickening from the south through the night, with hill fog developing across the Pennines. A few outbreaks of rain or drizzle then moving into southern parts towards dawn on Saturday. Minimum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Saturday:
Rather cloudy start, with outbreaks of rain across the southern parts, but also some brighter or sunny spells. Showers then developing from late morning into the afternoon, perhaps thundery. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Staying cool, with sunny spells and showers Sunday and Monday, and drier overnight with clear spells. Cloud and rain likely spreading south early Tuesday, before breaking to further showers later.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.